

THEY MAKE THEIR OWN

MODEL-DESIGNERS

The Maryland Institute of Art is producing, on a small but efficient scale, a number of high fashion designers, and models. During the past year they have put on two fashion shows that are worthy of distinction.

Two student designers, Miss Yvette Barnes and Miss Bronwyn Jones, gave showings of their best designs. Maryland Institute models Arangie Jones, Jo Ann Henry, Margaret Smith and Carole Norris wore the frocks with all the grace and flair of 5th Avenue's best.

The Institute trains students for high fashion designing. The course runs the regular four years and includes one semester of free-style fashion illustration.

One of the most outstanding student-designers is also one of the prettiest models, Miss Yvette Barnes.

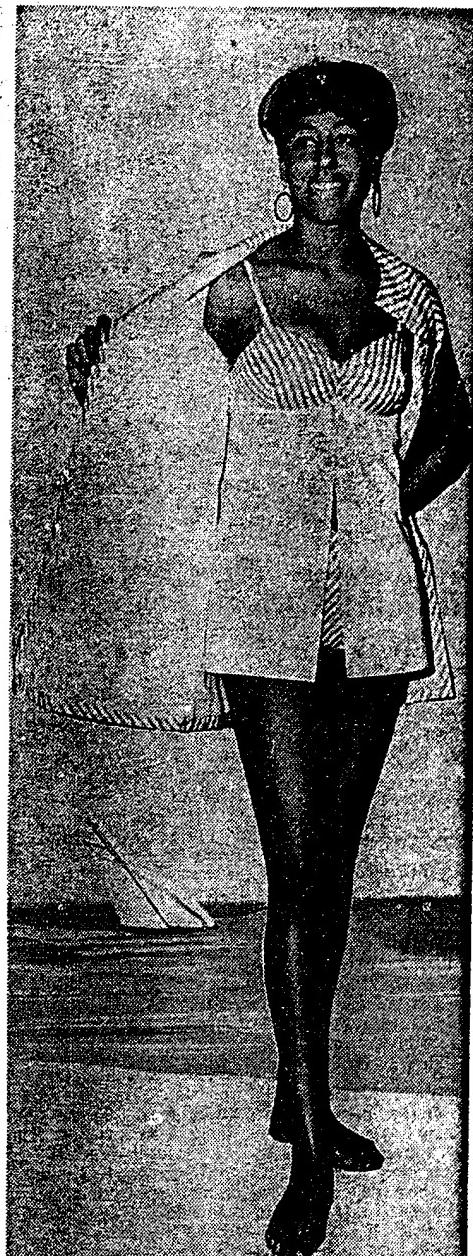

With her eye on the more strenuous training of a New York fashion house, Miss Barnes will migrate to The City of Bright Lights in the Fall to seek her fortune. AL RUTLEDGE

COCKTAIL ENSEMBLE — Black silk brocade coat with fuchsia thread running through it was fuchsia lining — Dress, black-chiffon over fuchsia. Modeled and Designed by Miss Yvette Barnes.

FOUR-PIECE BATHING SUIT — Including a mid-thigh length beach coat, two-piece bikini suit and button-on mini skirt in blue and white corduroy. The model is pretty Linda Farmer. The suit designed by Miss Yvette Barnes.
